The purpose of this article is to summarize federal and state policy initiatives to prevent and treat elder abuse and neglect. Because of the magnitude of the problem of elder abuse and neglect, both federal and state agencies, such as the Department of Health and Human Services (HHS), Health and Human Services Administration on Aging (HHS-A), and the Center for Medicare and Medicaid Services (CMS), have made substantial investments in creating policies and programs to combat elder abuse. This review discusses the historical course of elder abuse, the funding and legal changes that impact this problem, and the role that health professionals play in providing effective care to older patients. Prevention and intervention strategies for older adults are presented to provide key points for continuing care and long-term support for older individuals. The objective of preventing elder abuse and neglect is to save both money and human life. It can be accomplished by educating the health care system about this problem, providing training to health professionals, preventing elder abuse and neglect through policy initiatives, and ensuring that elder abuse and neglect-related policies and programs are available to providers and consumers.
