A whimsical adventure through a freeform world where elements of the past, present, and future intersect to craft an experience you can shape at every turn. There is no set path through the lands, and no way to survive alone. You must work with the townsfolk and the various creatures that roam the lands to better your chances of surviving. Errand Boy is a randomized roguelike with a built-in map editor that will change game rules as you play. Gameplay Features - Randomized. Every playthrough is a new adventure. - Rogue-like. Delivering errands and recovering items is critical, but not the only thing you need to succeed in Errand Boy. - Interweaving adventures. - 5 interweaving sub-quests with a goal of Saving Ashure. - A map editor designed from the ground up so players can quickly and easily create their own content and share it with others - Many ways to survive. - Dynamic world based around town mechanics and day/night cycle. - No loading screens in any game section. - Achievements/Leaderboard integration - Modify values such as time of day, weather, and the appearance of the land - Steam Cloud integration, so your progress isn't kept to yourself. - Players can choose to attack all raiders on sight or choose not to, and must interact with the world if they want to be successful. - Players can choose to attack all raiders on sight or choose not to, and must interact with the world if they want to be successful. - In-game map, quest log, and object inventory display are all interactive. - When selecting a place to send a message, your game speed will slow down to make sending a message at that location as easy as possible. - Errand Boy will record the message you send and broadcast it to the world, displaying your message to players near your location. - Quests are selectable. - The number of targets that can be struck by heroes will vary between quests. - Hero heroes can fight while other heroes carry out passive tasks. - All quests can be completed in any order. - Each hero has a unique power that can be used once per day. - Tasks can be altered in mid-progress. - Missions are done in the order they are assigned, not the order completed. - Choosing a task will randomly assign a hero for that task. - It is possible

Dungeon -- Welcome to The Depths, a vast estate owned by a cruel and insane Lord. He rules his human captives with an iron fist, and traps them into elaborate dungeons where they are used as tools or entertainment. You are captured during your raid on a laboratory, and the guards intend to sell you to a business client at The Depths. You can choose to sneak your way past the guards, and go to the dungeon. Or you can enter the dungeon and try to escape. Before you rush off to The Depths, you have to think about a keycard to open the door and the following exit. The exit to the city is behind a locked door at the end of the dungeon. The key can be found in a locked container at the end of the factory area. The first level contains your adventure. The second one is the factory. The third one is a dungeon with some traps and a fiend or two. The factory area is full of traps that can kill you in a few attacks. All of them are on the way to a way to the city. To solve them, go through the same path every time, use them as the way they are presented. The fiend pops up once in a while, but it is easier to kill him in a secret passage, found at the end of the factory area. The factory area is already locked, so it is possible to work your way from your cell in the factory straight to the exit. With a little trick, you can even avoid the factory altogether by going straight to the basement. The basement contains a locked entrance, that you can reach by following the stairs in the east. c9d1549cdd

Hi there. I have no idea what you're talking about, but I'm kind of interested. So, what is this new game? And what happens when you fail? Do you lose? And if so, how does that affect your score?SBC's move to 50-state business confirmed in new

SEC filing Cincinnati Bell has filed a “diversification and contingency plan” with the SEC that sets in motion an “unprecedented” diversification for the telecommunications company. The proposed move to become a “fully-diversified, post-incumbent local exchange provider,” would include the acquisition of Sprint's remaining 53 percent interest in the company, and its American Telephone & Telegraph Company (AT&T) holdings. The Bell Company says it will also make “significant capital investments” to maintain the current service and network it operates. The move would also include the acquisition of two wireless companies, “for the purpose of enabling them to offer more innovative wireless services for wireless service customers,” the company says. Read the filing here. SBC Cincy also tells regulators, as part of its general plan and the previous general line of credit, it has “established a $3 billion revolving credit facility with a five year term.” This, the company says, is “the first time that SBC has authorized a credit facility with a term of greater than one year.” SBC's intention is to use the funds for “general corporate purposes,” as well as “expedited principal payment and other borrowings.” A significant portion of the line is dedicated to fixed network assets, the company says. SBC also says that “its annual recurring expenditures will increase slightly compared to the prior 12 months,” adding that it is “forecasting a slight improvement in 2011 compared to the prior year.” This “represents a net annual decline in SG&A, though SBC states it expects SG&A to increase slightly.” Read the filing here. North Carolina-based SBC Global moves one step closer to the closure of its $8.1 billion acquisition of AT&T's high-speed broadband business, according to a filing with the U.S. Department of Justice on Thursday. The DOJ was asked by the FCC for permission to close the deal, as required under the E-Tag rule

Monthly Archives: November 2014 Since the abolition of slavery in Hong Kong in 1841, the Chinese workers sent to Hong Kong have been retained as plantation labour, or, in more modern terms, 'slave labour'. Slavery in Hong Kong exists in a complementary, intertwined system with the modern exploitation of China's internal migrant workers who are exploited globally in sweat shops. Moreover, in the last six years, since the establishment of 'One Country, Two Systems' (OCTS), there has been an increase in the number of Chinese workers sent to Hong Kong. According to data released by the Immigration Department, Hong Kong's population is increasing, and the demand for workers is growing. Moreover, the increasing number of individuals living in Britain, U.S and other countries have moved here to have easier access to Hong Kong. The 'One Country, Two Systems' structure under which Hong Kong is placed operates essentially along the lines of the 'open door' policy of the United States with respect to allowing third-country migrants, including Hong Kong SAR (Hong Kong Special Administrative Region) residents, into its territory. The model has, however, primarily allowed new arrivals from other mainland regions, with the exception of Shenzhen. However, since 2014, mainland residents into Hong Kong, now under the 'one country, two systems' have been increasing at an annual rate of 7.2%. In addition, it has become almost impossible for mainland Chinese to emigrate to most developed countries. According to the International Employment Database (GEM-EDGE), Hong Kong is the second largest recipient of international migrant workers from China, after Japan. The number of foreign workers from mainland China to Hong Kong reached a high of 41,721 in 2014, of which, 3,315 were from rural areas. Of these, 1,583 were registered for an extended stay in Hong Kong for up to five years, 7,822 were short-term workers and 962 had been brought from rural areas to work in urban centres, where there are no opportunities. The offshore processing strategy adopted by Hong Kong SAR is driven by its needs of a large influx of qualified foreign workers to support its growing population (as of the latest available data, it is expected to increase to 4.6 million by 2041) and the demand for 'coolie' labour. Furthermore, Hong Kong's garment industry currently relies heavily on economic migrants
