According to the International League Against Epilepsy, idiopathic epilepsies include three basic groups: juvenile myoclonic epilepsy, juvenile absence epilepsy, and infantile spasm. A typical juvenile myoclonic epilepsy case is illustrated. A juvenile myoclonic epilepsy patient had generalized tonic-clonic seizures and sometimes had focal seizures. Myoclonic jerks were mainly on the first toe of the left foot. The myoclonic jerks were either sporadic or occurred repeatedly at the same time or intermittently with the tonic seizures. The onset of generalized tonic-clonic seizures was usually between four and ten years of age. In infantile spasm the infant usually presents with a brief episode of myoclonic jerks and loss of consciousness similar to tonic seizures in epileptic encephalopathy of Lennox-Gastaut syndrome. For juvenile myoclonic epilepsy and infantile spasm, several antiepileptic drugs (AEDs), which are the most effective against absence seizures, are available, including valproate, lamotrigine, clonazepam and vigabatrin. However, there are few cases of complete seizure-freedom with only one antiepileptic drug. The International League Against Epilepsy recommends treatment that includes more than one antiepileptic drug for children with intractable epilepsies.Q: Why can't I type into the body area of an inline SVG I'm having trouble getting the text to appear inside the button.
